Dear [redacted]

How glad I am that at last I have been able to attend one of our annual meetings on this side of the Atlantic. I am immensely grateful to you for your very friendly welcome and for the many opportunities that we had to discuss so many important questions of mutual interest. It seemed to me that the ease in which we reached agreement was eloquent of our harmonious relationship to which we attach so much importance and which is really sealed by such understanding personal contacts.

Please give special greetings for me to your wife, with the hope that that tiresome ankle is not responding to treatment and also to Roland Way whom I was so glad to meet again.

*Yours sincerely,
J.R. Clark*
